2013 Strategic Plan Survey Highlights/Observations

1. There were 285 respondents.

2. Most respondents considered themselves “arts consumers” and more than half donate financially to arts and culture organizations. Twice the number of those who identified as artists also engaged in other activities to earn their living. Many volunteered for arts organizations or were board members. (Observation: most respondents seemed to engage in the arts on many fronts.)

3. Approximately 75% of respondents were 50 or older.

4. Half of the respondents had not received funding from NM Arts.

5. Occupations included artist, gallery owner, IT director, development strategist, director of education, adjunct professor, museum director, communications director, librarian, retired nurse, art center director, social worker, poet, photographer, non-profit consultant, executive director, arts administrator, university professor, MainStreet director, fundraiser and outreach programs manager.

6. Counties in which people responded live: Bernalillo (72), Santa Fe (79), Taos (17), Grant (16), Dona Ana (9), Sandoval (8), Luna, Chaves, Eddy, Torrance, Sierra, Lincoln, Quay, Los Alamos, Lea, Rio Arriba, Catron, San Miguel, Cibola, Valencia, San Juan, Colfax, Curry, Socorro.

7. Almost two-thirds participated in arts and cultural activities once or more per month.

8. Almost two-thirds also participated in the arts through social media or online sites.

9. The arts were very important to almost all (93%).

10. Cultural diversity was evident in most activities in their communities. Arts programs accessible to those with disabilities in their community was seen by 57% of respondents.

11. 97% thought the arts were important to tourism.

12. Three-quarters thought their technology was sufficient to access resources.

13. The largest barrier to attend arts events was time, followed by cost.

14. Word of mouth was the way many people learned about arts activities. Followed by local media coverage and emails. Only half went to social media sites.

New Mexico Arts Strategic Plan Survey - 1
15. 95% thought that the arts provided them with a better quality of life and 96% thought arts education was essential for their community’s schools.

16. Support for the arts seemed about the same as three years ago.

17. Challenges facing arts organizations were ranked from most critical to least critical as:
   - Funding
   - Board Leadership and recruitment
   - Publicity/PR
   - Audience Development
   - Staffing
   - Succession planning/Leadership development
   - Volunteer recruitment
   - Keeping pace with technology
   - Educational outreach

18. Challenges facing educators were ranked from most critical to least critical as:
   - Salary
   - Administrative/district support
   - Community support
   - Guidance and support from the NM Public Education Department
   - Space/facilities
   - Class scheduling or instructional time

19. Challenges facing individual artists were ranked from most critical to least critical as:
   - Financial resources
   - Exhibition/performance opportunities
   - Marketing/PR
   - Professional development opportunities
   - Space/facilities
   - Networking with other artists

20. Most individual artists received formal training though it appeared that many learned from a variety of methods and also trained or taught others in a variety of settings.

21. New Mexico Arts priorities were ranked in the following order (by percentage of those who thought the priority “very important,”)
   - Advocating for public (and private) support of the arts
   - Promoting arts education
   - Providing grants/services to arts organizations
   - Linking the arts to economic development
   - Linking the arts to cultural tourism
   - Providing services to artists
   - Investing in public art works
   - Facilitating collaborations between arts and community organizations
   - Facilitating professional development for arts organization board and staff
Observations regarding answers sorted by age:

1. Across all ages over two-thirds considered themselves and arts consumer. More respondents in the 20 to 39 age group identified as working for an arts organization (between 63 and 78%). 58% of the 60 to 69 group donated financially to arts organizations while only approximately 30-33% of those 20 to 39 did.

2. Those 39 and under are attending events once or more per month more than those older (which is the opposite of the usual assumption.) However, those older attend more events 6 to 10 times per year than those younger.

3. Those 49 and under are participating in arts activities outside of live events at a higher rate than those 50 and over. However it appears that all age groups are participating in these kinds of activities multiple times per year (through social media, downloading music, etc.).

4. By age people learned about arts opportunities primarily through:
   - 60 to 69 – emails
   - 50 to 59 – local media coverage
   - 40 to 49 – word of mouth and emails
   - 30 to 39 – word of mouth
   - 20 to 29 – word of mouth
