Message from Cabinet Secretary Veronica N. Gonzales

As we begin Governor Susana Martinez’s second term, I find myself excited about the possibilities and potential for the coming four years.

My first term has been primarily focused internally - on stabilization of services, financial accountability, efficiencies, transparency, and strengthening core operations and education outreach. I look back with pride at our accomplishments in those areas.

Across the agency, we have improved fiscal accountability and efficiencies. We conducted a department-wide assessment of operations and staffing levels, and subsequently filled critical vacancies, reducing the vacancy rate from a high of 19% to the current rate of 11% in Fiscal Year (FY) 2016. We made a number of important reclassifications to address shortfalls and improve staff retention, and raised the salaries of the lowest paid frontline, reception, guards, and janitorial staff. Staff morale has improved considerably since 2011. Two remaining critical stabilization goals are to replace reliance on non-recurring funds for recurring operating costs, and to prioritize the addition of targeted staff positions in divisions where recession-related staff cuts hit hardest.

Now in Governor Martinez’s second term, I plan to look outward, focusing on statewide outreach and external relations, national initiatives, and international partnerships with Mexico and Spain. We will continue to develop inter- and intra-departmental partnerships - prioritizing effective, quality programs that further strengthen DCA’s services that directly impact the citizens of and visitors to our state. We will also continue our efforts to:

- increase awareness of DCA programs and services through enhancing marketing and communications;
- align our education programs with state education Common Core standards and benchmarks; and,
- realize the economic potential of arts and cultural industries across New Mexico and support the development of creative communities; and

Selected Accomplishments

- Stronger Fiscal Responsibility and Administrative Practices and Procedures: Throughout the department, DCA has implemented a tightening of management administrative practices and procedures, including fiscal management of operating budget and capital outlay funding, human resources procedures, and a higher level of focus on legal sufficiency. Our legal team has been expanded from a part-time attorney to 1.5 attorneys and an on-going legal intern through a partnership with University of New Mexico School of Law. This has helped to address a serious backlog and expedite processing of contracts and legal review. DCA initiated a significant number of reclassifications to address pay inequities in similar positions across the department. Work continues to rebuild staff capacity in the financial services area and strengthen capital outlay management. The FY2014 financial statement was submitted on-time with a clean audit opinion. Prior year findings resolved: 15 of 20, including three material weakness findings. Tighter management practices help
DCA staff perform their jobs and ultimately results in more efficient delivery of services to New Mexicans.

Historic Sites: Since she took office, Secretary Gonzales has made it her goal to support the eight state Historic Sites as vibrant, unique places at which visitors can experience and learn about history where it happened. In the past year alone, attendance has increased 11% across the Sites. Governor Susana Martinez, the State Legislature, and the Museum of New Mexico Foundation significantly stepped up their support of the Historic Sites, helping to secure legislative allocations and major donors to increase core operations, exhibit, and education resources and to fund special projects. Starting with an assessment and marketing plan for Historic Sites and the name change from Monuments to Historic Sites, improvements have been rapidly implemented. The hiring of new managers and staff at Jemez, El Camino Real, Fort Stanton, Lincoln, and Fort Sumner complemented the dedicated managers and staff already in place at Coronado and Fort Selden. The Taylor-Mesilla Historic Site progressed with site improvements and the hiring of a curator to oversee the vast collection donated by the Taylor family. The Los Luceros historic hacienda and farmlands improved under DCA’s management, and DCA is seeking to enter into an agreement with New Mexico State University for continued operation of the historic, agricultural site.

Space History: Over $1 million dollars of improvements have been made to the exhibits, buildings, and grounds of the New Mexico Museum of Space History over the past three years, utilizing a combination of capital outlay funds, budget funds, vacancy savings and earned revenues. Attendance has climbed by almost 25%, and is now over 90,000 visitors. Increased on-site community events and public outreach has significantly impacted local and regional recognition of the facility, driving visitation as well. New computer and touch interactives and exhibits supported through the museum’s foundation have received incredibly positive response from all guests. Widespread collaborations with the Smithsonian, City of Alamogordo, Holloman Air Force Base, the New Mexico Air National Guard, the New Mexico Aviation Aerospace Association, Virgin Galactic, local businesses, school districts statewide, and West Texas have resulted in substantial impacts from loans, grants, and exhibit refurbishment, to significantly expanded STEM based educational outreach.

New Mexico State Library (NMSL): NMSL is another high priority for Secretary Gonzales. DCA Deputy Secretary Michael Delello was on special assignment to oversee the Library as Interim State Library Division Director, while a national search for a new State Librarian was conducted. The successful search resulted in the arrival of Kathleen Peiffer, former Deputy State Librarian for the State of New Jersey. While under Delello’s leadership, the Library solidified its relationship with its client base of public and tribal libraries. It also continued to address areas of critical need including filling key vacant positions, implementing a staff reorganization to meet NMSL client needs; making significant administrative procedural improvements to expedite the disbursement of General Obligations Bonds (GOB) to public and tribal libraries; and launching bold, new public outreach and programs.

During the summer of 2014, the State Library partnered with a number of organizations to create the innovative Makerstate Initiative, engaging public libraries across New Mexico. The goal of the program is to excite New Mexico communities about science, technology, engineering, art, and math (STEAM) to prepare children, minorities, women, and underrepresented populations for the technological fields of the future. In February 2015, the NM State Library announced an innovative new database program, Brainfuse, which provides online, one-to-one tutoring, study skills-building, and career assistance services. Most recently, in partnership with the state’s eight museums and seven Historic Sites and the public and tribal libraries, Department of Cultural Affairs’ launched the FamilyPass, a program that provides a check-out pass at local libraries for free admission (up to 6 people) to 15 state museums and historic sites.

- Marketing: Across the department, the Secretary continues to invest in marketing. Through the support of the Executive and Legislature, additional funding has been invested in targeted marketing activities. Advertising is critical to bring in repeat visitors when new exhibits open, such as national traveling exhibitions, and to use specially curated exhibitions to reach out to and cultivate new audiences. DCA has established a cross-division Communications Team, sharing expertise and building cohesive initiatives. The Team is working to expand and utilize new media and new technologies to enhance dissemination of information about the availability and diversity of educational programs available through DCA’s museums, historic sites and libraries.

- Statewide Assessment of Impact of Arts and Culture Industries: In an effort to assess and study the myriad contributions of the arts and cultural industry to our state, the New Mexico Department of Cultural Affairs (DCA) commissioned, for the first time in 20 years, a comprehensive statewide report. The independent study, conducted by the University of New Mexico's Bureau of Business and Economic Research (BBER), illuminated a $5.6 billion annual impact of this sector, making it one of the top three economic drivers of the state. Crucially, it also identified critical challenges and untapped opportunities to improving the economic health and financial stability of New Mexicans.

- Improving the Economic Viability of New Mexico through the Integration of the Arts and Culture Sector: As one of the Secretary’s priorities, DCA has established a strategic initiative to help improve the economic viability of New Mexico's families and our creative communities. Already serving over one million children and their families annually through our education and outreach programs, DCA currently fosters a profound impact upon the quality of life for New Mexico families and is uniquely positioned to take action.

  The Secretary is embarking on a statewide tour to engage the art, culture, and business sectors in the BBER study's release and follow-up. DCA has established a coalition of partners including the McCune Family Foundation; the University of New Mexico Anderson School of Management and the Fine Arts College; the Cities of Santa Fe, Albuquerque, and Las Cruces; community arts councils; other state agencies; representatives from the business sector; and the public and tribal libraries.

- Partnership with the Private and Non-profit Sector: DCA continues to value and strengthen partnerships with non-profit organizations and individuals, who supplement the state’s investment in cultural programs through private contributions of significant amounts of both time and money to enhance cultural programs and services provided by the state. In Fiscal Year 14, DCA’s foundation partners contributed $4.6 million in support of special exhibitions and educational programs. More than 1,300 volunteers across New Mexico contributed more than 115,000 hours of their time on Department of Cultural Affairs’ programs and projects, an estimated value of $2.3 million. This is equivalent to 55 full time employees.

- Historic Preservation Investment: $1.1 million in heritage preservation projects took place across New Mexico, through the Historic Preservation Division awarding 16 grants totaling $304,625, leveraging $735,375 invested by communities.

Strategic Planning Process

The Department of Cultural Affairs oversees fifteen Divisions committed to collectively serving as the cultural steward of the state’s patrimony. Over one million people visit DCA’s museums and historic sites or participate in DCA’s educational programs each year.

DCA’s Strategic Plan is informed by input from all of DCA’s sites and divisions, its governing and advisory boards and commissions, and many different public constituencies interested in and committed to New Mexico’s cultural affairs.

During the 2015 interim, Secretary Gonzales toured each of the divisions’ 15 sites, holding listening sessions with almost 500 staff to hear about issues of importance to them. Recurring themes include the need for additional staff critical to operations; improved facilities management; enhanced information technologies, including a new ticketing system, improved security, connectivity in some of our remote areas, digitization of collections; and additional marketing, including enhanced usage of social medias.

The department’s goals and objectives continue to be closely aligned with the Governor’s focus on education, the economy, and rebuilding public trust through stewardship, accountability, effective and responsible resource management, and transparency in government. The plan also includes specific goals emerging from the BBER study findings to build a common agenda for the arts and cultural industry and raise the profile of New Mexico as a cultural state.
DCA’s Strategic Goals are:

- Maximize Impact of Programs and Services across New Mexico. In line with Governor Martinez’s agenda and one of the highest priorities for the Department is emphasis on supporting formal and informal education delivery. DCA is committed to improving awareness of and participation in its programs and services and reaching new constituencies and forming new partnerships to maximize impact. Through partnerships with educational institutions and federal, state, and local governments, and public and private organizations, DCA is strengthening and expanding the reach of its programs.

- Strengthen Arts & Cultural Industries across NM. DCA is aggressively advancing an agenda to strengthening the arts and cultural industries across New Mexico. In response to the department’s release of the 2014 DCA/University of New Mexico’s Bureau of Business and Economic (BBER) economic impact report, DCA has developed a number of strategies for strengthening arts and cultural industries. DCA is engaging public, philanthropic, and local businesses, community and arts organizations in a cohesive agenda to strengthen local resources and create robust opportunities for building New Mexico’s creative economy.

- Build Cohesive Messaging and Branding across DCA. DCA’s cross-divisional marketing team is developing a communications plan, which builds on all aspects of the Strategic Plan. The team is creating new Department “tag lines”, “stylebook”, and a department guide/brochure describing the department’s programs and services in a single publication. Additionally, DCA continues to pursue the use of new and enhanced technologies as well as the integration of new media in marketing, programs and services.

- Improve Service Delivery, Efficiency and Accountability. DCA is committed to continuing to strengthen and streamline administrative and management practices to improve performance. In the area of human resources, the department has made numerous reclassifications to address pay inequities in similar positions across the department, and to improve retention of staff. Vacancy rates have been reduced from a high of 18% to the current 11%, making a tremendous impact to stabilize the workloads being shouldered by staff. And lastly, DCA is seeking to rebuild and institutionalize a stable funding stream for facilities management to include both operating and capital programs.
